Directions: Fill in the table with parts of speech from the given passage.

Wow! The young girl quickly ran across the park because she saw a beautiful butterfly with colorful wings. She was so happy that she laughed loudly and tried to follow it. The butterfly flew over the bright flowers, circled a tall tree, and finally landed on a green leaf. Her brother watched from the bench and smiled as he clapped his hands. Soon, they both sat together and enjoyed the warm sunshine while listening to the birds sing.

Part of Speech	Word
Noun	girl, park, butterfly, wings, tree, leaf, flowers, birds
Pronoun	she, it, her, he, his, they
Verb	ran, saw, was, laughed, tried, follow, flew, circled, landed
Adjective	young, beautiful, colorful happy, bright, tall
Adverb	quickly, loudly, over, soon
Article	the, a
Preposition	across, with, from, to
Interjection	Wow

Sentence Structure

A sentence expresses a complete thought. A fragment does not express a complete thought.

Ex:	Fragment	the mayor and his family
	Sentence	The mayor and his family joined the conference yesterday.

- Sentences begin with a capital letter and end with an end mark.
- A statement ends with a period.

Ex: The weather is nice today!

- A command ends with a period or an exclamation point.

Ex: Add Cheese to the salad.

- A question ends with a question mark.

Ex: Where shall we travel tomorrow?

- An exclamation ends with an exclamation point.

Ex: What a lovely dress!

- An exclamation point can set off an interjection—a word that expresses strong emotion.

Ex: Wow! She's really talented!

Bravo! You did a great job!

A complete thought needs both a subject and a predicate.

Ex:	Subject	the mayor and his family
	Predicate	joined the conference yesterday
	Sentence	The mayor and his family joined the conference yesterday.

A sentence that does not have both a subject and a predicate is incomplete. It is a sentence fragment.

Compound Sentences

- A compound sentence is made of two simple sentences that have been combined with a comma and a coordinating conjunction or a semicolon.
- The coordinating conjunctions are FANBOYS; for – and – nor – but – or – yet – so.
  Ex.: I baked a cake, but it tasted horrible. (The second sentence shows contrast)
- FANBOYS join two independent clauses.
- A semicolon is used to separate two parts of a compound sentence not separated by a conjunction and gives more details about the first sentence.
  Ex.: I fixed the car; it wasn't working properly. (The second sentence gives more details about the first one)

A. Directions: Combine each pair of sentences using a conjunction or a semicolon.

A clause is a group of words with a subject and a verb.

An independent clause forms a complete thought and can be a sentence.

A dependent clause is not a complete thought and cannot stand as a sentence.

A subordinating conjunction connects a dependent and independent clause. Words such as after, although, as, because, until, when, and while are subordinating conjunctions.

Ex:	Dependent Clause	when he woke up
	Independent Clause	He got dressed and went to the office.

A complex sentence is an independent clause and one or more dependent clauses.

Ex: When he woke up, he got dressed and went to the office.

A run-on sentence results when two main or independent clauses are joined with no punctuation or coordinating conjunction.

The use of a comma in a run-on sentence that has two main clauses is called a comma splice.

To correct a comma splice, add a suitable conjunction after the comma, or replace the comma with a period and create two sentences.

Ex:	Run-on Sentence	The blue jay is one of the many birds native to North America it is a member of the crow family.
	Correction	The blue jay is one of the many birds native to North America. It is a member of the crow family.
	Comma Splice	Blue jays are protective of their nests, they can be aggressive toward humans who come too close.
	Correction	Blue jays are protective of their nests. They can be aggressive toward humans who come too close.
