The Writing Process

Prewriting: The student brainstorms and thinks about what to write.

Drafting: The student writes down their thoughts on paper. It is the "rough draft" or "sloppy copy".

Revising: The student rereads their work and makes changes to improve the writing piece.

Proofreading: The student edits the paper for conventions.

Publishing: The student writes the final copy. It is ready to be shared with others.

The Writing Traits

Sentence Fluency...

the rhythm and flow of your writing

Conventions...

the correct spelling, punctuation, capitalization, and grammar

Presentation...

the overall look of your writing

Which sentences do you prefer? Why?

#1: I had a birthday party at my house. My friends came over. We played games and ate cake. Everyone sang happy birthday. I opened my presents. It was a great day.

#2: I celebrated my birthday with a fantastic party at my cozy home. My friends were beaming with excitement and joy. We played fun games like musical chairs and piñata filling the air with laughter and cheers. Afterward, we gathered around the beautifully decorated table, where a delicious chocolate cake awaited. Everyone sang “Happy Birthday” with cheerful voices. I felt a rush of happiness and gratitude as I opened my colorful presents. It was an unforgettable day filled with love, laughter, and wonderful memories!

#1: Tammy lost her favorite toy. She felt sad. She looked everywhere for it. She asked her mom for help.

#2: Tammy sat on her bedroom floor, feeling heavy-hearted. Her beloved toy, Lindsey, was nowhere to be found. She desperately searched every corner of her room to no avail. A wave of disappointment washed over her as tears began to well up in her eyes. With a quivering voice, she sought her mom’s help. “Mom, I can’t find Lindsey,” Tammy’s voice trembled with worry, hoping that together they could make her frown turn into a smile once again.

Stretching Sentences Using Million Dollar Word$

Million-dollar words are powerful, descriptive words that can elevate a piece of writing and make it more engaging and expressive. Unlike "blah", basic words, million-dollar words are more specific, vivid, and interesting and help paint a clearer picture in the reader's mind.

Example:

- Use "worn out" instead of "tired".
- Use "exclaimed" instead of "said".
- Use "delightedly" instead of "happily".

A. Highlight the million-dollar words in the following sentences.

1. The science teacher enthusiastically requested her students to collaborate on exciting projects.

2. The projects were for the prestigious science fair that will be held by the end of the month.

B. Transform the following sentences by replacing the underlined blah words with million-dollar words. Add more words to create sentences full of vivid images.

1. A group of eager students chose to make a volcano. They gathered some stuff for the model.

2. They diligently collaborated to make the model and paint it.

3. The highly anticipated day arrived, and the students explained how the volcano works. Everyone was happy.

C. Connect the above sentences, creating a meaningful paragraph. Don't forget to add topic and closing sentences.

Using Million Dollar Word$ allows writers to effectively convey their thoughts and feelings, making their writing shine. By choosing FAAVS, writers can capture the readers' attention and make their stories more memorable.

FAAVS are five fantastic million-dollar-word tools that can transform sentences, paragraphs, and essays into vibrant and exciting pieces of art!

1. Figurative Language

Figurative language expressions are used in creative ways to ignite the readers' imagination. The words used do not necessarily have direct meanings.

Examples of Figurative language:

- Alliteration: Repeated beginning consonant sounds.
  Ex: Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers.

- Idioms: Phrases that have different meanings from their individual parts.
  Ex: Amanda spilled the beans. She told her mom everything!

- Simile: When two different objects are compared using as or like.
  Ex: Adam bolted like a frightened rabbit.

- Metaphor: When two different objects are compared without using as or like.
  Ex: The sun is a gleaming pearl.

- Personification: Non-human objects given human characteristics.
  Ex: The candle flame danced in the wind.

- Onomatopoeia: Words that sound like their meanings.
  Ex: Splash! Zap! Poof! OMG! Wham!

- Hyperbole: An extreme exaggeration used to make a point or create a strong impression.
  Ex: I'm so tired I could sleep for a year.
  I've told you a million times!

It's your turn! Add a figure of speech to each of the following sentences.

Example: The boy was tired. (idiom)
The boy was ready to hit the sack after a long day of practice.

1. The tree _____. (personification)
2. He is so hungry that he could eat _____. (Hyperbole)
3. _____The boy jumped into the pool. (onomatopoeia)
4. My birthday cake was _____(honey). (simile)
5. The dog ran fast. (metaphor)

2. Adverbs that shine: Adverbs give extra information about how actions are performed. Many adverbs end in -ly
Ex: The kids eagerly waited for the play to start.

It's your turn! Add adverbs that shine to the following sentences.

1. The sun is shining.
2. The baby slept in his crib.
3. She ran to the park.

3. Adjectives that sparkle: Adjectives are special words that describe nouns, helping the readers learn more about the people, places, and things around them. Sparkling adjectives bring the pieces of writing to life.
Ex: The vibrant blooming flower danced in the gentle breeze.

It's your turn! Add adjectives that sparkle to the following sentences.

1. The _____girl wore a _____dress.
2. The _____cat played with a _____, _____ ball.

4. Verbs that strengthen: Verbs are action words. Strong verbs create a sense of energy and intensity, drawing readers into the action and making them feel as if they were part of the story.

Ex: Adam sprinted down the track.

It's your turn! Replace the verbs with ones that strengthen and rewrite the sentences accordingly.

1. Anna said hello to her friend.

2. The boy ate his lunch.

5. Sense words that sizzle: Sense words are descriptive words that engage all five senses: sight, sound, smell, taste, and touch. These words help create vivid images in the pieces of writing, allowing readers to experience the story fully.

- Sight: Descriptive words: bright, shimmering, shadowy, dull

  Ex: The vibrant flowers danced in the gentle breeze, their colors sparkling in the sunlight.

- Sound: Descriptive words: whisper, crash, roar, buzz

  Ex: The leaves rustled softly, and the distant thunder rumbled like a giant's growl.

- Smell: Descriptive words: fragrant, musty, pungent, sweet, acrid

  Ex: The fragrant aroma of freshly baked cookies filled the air, inviting everyone into the kitchen.

- Taste: Descriptive words: savory, tangy, bitter, sweet, spicy

  Ex: The tangy lemon tart made her mouth water; its zesty flavor danced on her tongue.

- Touch: Descriptive words: smooth, rough, sticky, warm, prickly

Ex: The rough bark of the tree scratched her hand as she climbed higher, feeling the warm sun on her back.

It's your turn! Add descriptive details to each sentence, highlighting the sense mentioned in the brackets.

1. The stars shone at night. (sight)

2. The bell rang. (sound)

---

3. The soup was hot and yummy. (taste)

---

4. The cookies smelled good.

---

5. The blanket was soft (Touch)

Read the following paragraph.

The beach was a beautiful paradise on a bright summer day. The golden sand felt superbly warm and soft beneath my toes, like a cozy blanket inviting me to play. As I peacefully strolled closer to the sparkling blue ocean, the gentle waves crashing against the shore made a soothing sound that filled me with tranquility. The sun shone with a magnificent glow on the surroundings. Seagulls soared overhead, their cheerful calls mingling with the laughter of children building sandcastles nearby. I could smell the salty sea breeze and the sweet scent of sunscreen, which reminded me of fun days spent in the sun. Splash! My heart leaped with joy as I dove into the cool water, feeling the refreshing waves tickle my legs. The beach was a magical place where I felt free and alive!

Narrative Writing

What is a narrative?

- A narrative is a well-organized story that shares an experience, either real or imaginary. It includes important elements like characters, a conflict, a sequence of events, a climax, and a resolution where the problem is solved and the message becomes clear. Often, a narrative explores a deeper idea or a theme, such as bravery, friendship, or growth.

In a Narrative:

- Narratives can be written in first person where the narrator is YOU. First-person pronouns are used such as I, me, we, us, our, mine
- Narratives can also be written in the third person where you write about others. You will use third-person pronouns such as he, she, them, hers, themselves.

- Your narrative should be between 250 and 300 words. It should flow smoothly from beginning to end, keeping the reader interested and emotionally connected.

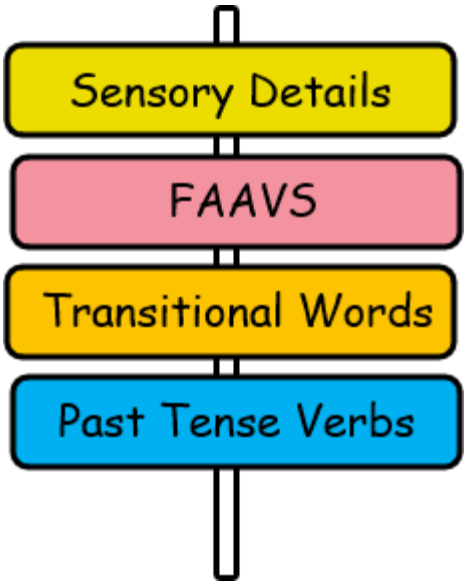

Parts of a narrative:

A narrative consists of four paragraphs.

- ☆ Start with a catchy title.
- ○ Introduction (1 paragraph)

must include:

- Hook
- Characters
- Setting
- Scene and setting description

- ○ Body (2 paragraphs)

Body 1

- Events in chronological order
- Conflict
- Descriptive Details
- Climax

Body 2

- Detail the climax
- Events that lead to the resolution
- Descriptive Details
- Transitional Words

- ○ Ending (1 paragraph)

must include:

- Resolution
- Feelings/ final thoughts
- Lesson learned
- Looking towards the future

Plot Mountain

Telling a story is like climbing up and down the sides of a mountain to reach the other side.

Climax

Peak of the conflict followed by a turning point that begins to lead the story toward resolution

Middle

Rising Action

Falling Action

② Rising Action

The main events of the story and the conflict the characters face

③ Falling Action

Characters deal with the conflict and move toward a resolution

Exposition

Introduction of the characters and setting at the beginning of the story ①

④ Resolution

End of the story where conflict is solved, and the lesson becomes clear

step 1

Introduction

The introduction is the opening of your narrative. It sets the stage for your story and encourages the reader to keep going. A strong introduction captures the reader's attention and gives important background information. It's where you create a mood for your story to hook your reader for more.

In your introduction paragraph, you should include:

1. A powerful hook
2. The setting: Clearly showing where and when the story takes place
3. The characters: Introduce who is involved in the story
4. A description of the scene: Use descriptive language to describe the setting and weather to pull the reader into your world.
5. Mood and voice: Use word choice, sentence style, and emotion to show how the characters feel, think, and talk.

Sound: Crack! Lightning split the sky, followed by a thunderclap so loud it rattled the windows and shook my chest.

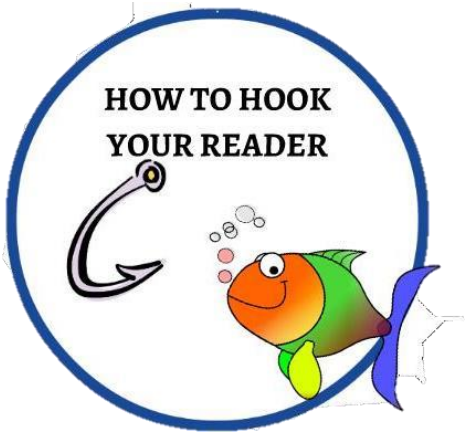

Dialogue: "Whatever you do, don't touch that lever," whispered Ben.

Question: What would you do if you found a note in your locker warning you not to go home after school?

Gerund: Climbing the ancient stone tower was the only way to see what was waiting on the other side of the wall.

Setting: As the sun sank behind the jagged mountains, the forest was filled with eerie silence and shadows stretched like long fingers across the trail.

Flashback: Just thinking about last summer made my stomach twist. The night I got lost in the woods still feels like it happened yesterday.

How to set the mood of your story through voice

Mood is how the story makes your reader feel.
Voice is the writer's style and word choice.

To write a strong narrative, the writer's voice should match the mood of the story.

How to do it:

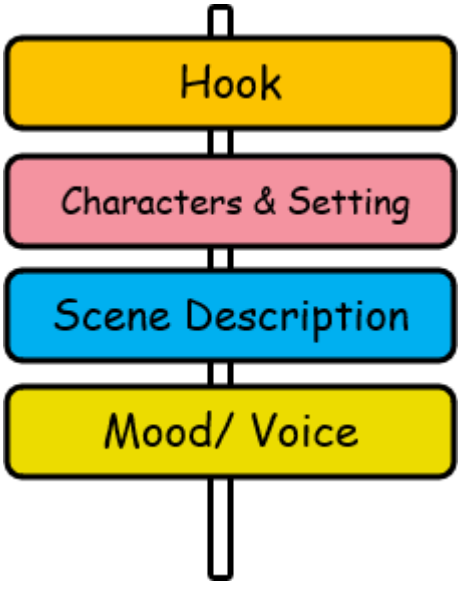

- ⇨ Mood: cheerful and optimistic
- ⇨ Voice: Energetic, confident, and upbeat

Example: The sun was shining, my backpack was packed, and I couldn't stop smiling. It was the first day of school, and I was finally in fifth grade! I practically danced down the sidewalk, ready to see my friends and meet my new teacher.

- ⇨ Mood: Tense and stormy
- ⇨ Voice: sarcastic and nervous

Example: CRACK! The lightning split the sky just as I stepped outside. Great! First day of school, and I already felt like I was walking straight into a disaster.

Introduction Recap

Step 2

The part of the essay consists of two paragraphs: the rising action and the falling action. It's the most important part of your story.

The rising action presents the main conflict and builds up the tension and problem that the main character faces. It leads up to the climax, which is the most intense point in the story.

Climax = Turning point ➔ After this point, the problem starts to change. This part shows how the main character works with the other characters to solve the problem.

The falling action paragraph shows how the characters react to the problem. It starts with detailing how the characters felt and acted at the climactic point (The highest point of tension or excitement in the story).

Falling action = the calm after the storm ➔ problems are getting solved

What do the characters do? How do they feel? This part may show their bravery, fear, or how they struggle to solve the problem.

Body 1: The Rising Action

This is where the main part of your story begins.

- What were the characters doing at that time?
- What type of conflict did they face?
- How did that make them feel? What actions (show, don't tell actions) showed their struggles?
- Tell the events in chronological order.
- How did the problem escalate and become more tense?
- Use strong descriptive details and FAAVS to paint a vivid image in your reader's mind.
- This paragraph should end with the most intense moment. (the climax).

Body 2: Climax Moving Toward the Falling Action

This paragraph includes what happened when the story started to change.

- What did the characters do at the climax point? Detail the characters' feelings and actions in response to their disappointment, frustrations, struggles, or excitement.
- What steps did they take to resolve their conflict?
- What did the main character do to save the day?
- Use more million-dollar words to show how the characters grow or change on their path to resolution.

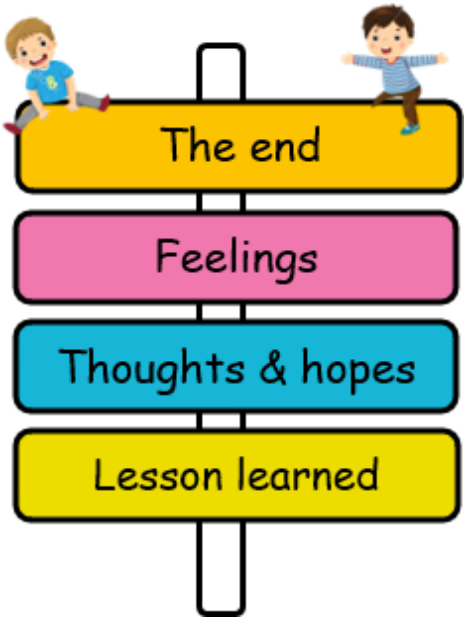

Ending

Step 3

The closing paragraph (The resolution) is where all the problems are solved, things are coming to an end/ show how the characters changed/ give a final feeling or mood.

The paragraph must include:

- The end of the story
- How the characters felt
- A lesson learned
- A final thought the characters might have

Forest, Footsteps, and River Fury

Exploring Valley Pine Forest, my friend Thomas and I set off on a magical adventure. One sunny morning, sunlight spilled through the branches, and birds glittering like living jewels flew above us. The trees whispered in the breeze as we walked deeper into the forest with our cameras. Curious and a little nervous, we followed a strange sound, unaware that danger was waiting just ahead.

Before long, we discovered a fascinating sight. A mother bear was catching fish while her cubs splashed in the stream. We quietly took pictures and watched in amazement. Soon after, Thomas stepped onto a mossy rock to get a better photo. Suddenly, the rock slipped beneath his feet, and he slid toward a roaring waterfall!

At that very moment, my heart pounded like a drum. Thomas waved his arms and cried for help. The river roared angrily below as water sprayed into the air. Without thinking, I lunged forward and grabbed his wrist. For a few terrifying seconds, I thought we would both fall. Moments later, a park ranger appeared. She was faster than fear. Together, we pulled Thomas back to safety.

Finally, we walked home, shaken and amazed. We could not stop talking about our wildest adventure. At the end of the day, we learned that true courage means helping others even when you are afraid.
